EDITOR'S NOTE

We are experiencing the pleasure of presenting the 33th issue of our Journal of Modern Turkish History Studies to the science world. In this issue of our journal, we gave place to 16 separate scientific studies that shed light on the past with their political, social and economic content. Studies that examined child beggars issue in Ottoman and question of abandoned goods belonging to Armenians who migrated from the country which can be counted among social problems present important informations to the reader. In addition to these, articles about Niyazi Berkes' and Refik Halit Karay's world of thought who have places in Turkish intellectuals take place in our this issue. Also, the assassination of Zeki Bey, Patriarchate issue during Laussane negotiations, "Blue Book" prepared by the British government on the issue of Armenian Relocation, the exile travels of the last Sultan Vahideddin who left the country after the National Struggle, studies examining the assassination attempt against Ataturk compose some of articles take place in our this issue.

I appreciate everyone who contributed to processes of refereeing as well as those who contributed to the publishing phase of our this issue with a rich content. I wish this issue will be useful to the science world.
